

Professional Development in Teaching Program for Graduate Students and Postdocs

Graduate students and postdocs can participate in the Professional Development in Teaching Program through completing different levels of engagement. Participants need not finish requirements in order, but will only receive certification at a level once all requirements for that level and all lower levels are met. With approval, qualifying departmental pedagogy training may take the place of one advanced-level workshop. For more information about what constitutes a qualifying teaching experience, please refer to the “Documenting a Teaching Experience” handout. Currently, the Teaching Citation track is only available to graduate students, as this program is co-sponsored by the Graduate School and appears on a transcript.

To learn more or to schedule an initial consultation, visit teachingcenter.wustl.edu

